

2013 BROKENWOOD OAKEY CREEK SEMILLON

Review Summary

BROKENWOOD

AUSTRALIAN CRAFT AT ITS FINEST

95 pts “The sandy loam soils of the vineyard are tailor-made for Semillon. An immaculately balanced wine, just beginning its evolution from fresh-faced youth to adulthood. It’s unusual to see a wine such as this released alongside 6-year-olds, but it does have all-important length and grip.”

James Halliday
Australian Wine Companion
2016

92 pts “It’s still early days for the 2013 Oakey Creek Vineyard Semillon, which still shows a touch of green to its light straw color. It smells like the crushed stones you might have dumped to form a garden path merged with faint whiffs of sea spray and citrus. This light-bodied wine can be drunk now as a mouthwatering aperitif or with raw shellfish, but my preference would be to cellar it for another 5 years to let it develop additional richness and complexity.”

Joe Czerwinski
Robert Parker Wine Advocate
December 2017

92 pts “This white shows lots of sliced green apple and flint character. It’s full-bodied with fresh acidity and a sherbet aftertaste.”

Nick Stock
JamesSuckling.com
October 24, 2013