

2012 KILIKANOON MORT'S BLOCK RIESLING

Review Summary

94 pts “Pale color, bright green; a lean and focused bouquet of lime, lemon, bath talc and spices; the palate is super taut and racy, bone dry and linear, with enough flesh on its bones for a long, harmonious and pleasant finish; time will not be an issue.”

James Halliday, Australian Wine Companion

91 pts “Bright straw. Fresh citrus fruits and white flowers on the assertively perfumed nose and in the mouth. Dry and incisive, with a silky texture and strong back-end cut. Closes with very good energy and lift, leaving grapefruit and floral notes behind.”

Josh Reynolds, Stephen Tanzer’s International Wine Cellar

91 pts “The 2012 Riesling Mort’s Block reveals an intense nose of lime zest and white blossoms, honeyed peach and a touch of pineapple. Tight and crisp in the mouth, it has great intensity and a long finish. It should age well.”

Lisa Perrotti-Brown, Robert Parker’s The Wine Advocate
February 2013

90 pts “Tight, dry and refreshing, with grapefruit, apple and floral flavors, persisting on the slightly raw finish.”

90 pts “Australian Rieslings, such as this one, continue to captivate. The delight this wine delivers should come as no surprise. The Watervale area of the Clare Valley is especially well known for top-notch Riesling, and Kilikanoon is an excellent producer. Its bracing dry laser-like focus and the lime-like citrus quality tingle the palate. It’s long and cutting, in an uplifting way. A versatile wine, it’s perfect for cutting this summer’s heat and humidity, for sushi, or with spicy Asian fare.”
